May 10-2w. Middletown, Del. ather near me, little children, Stand you close around my knee; or my voice is waxing feedle, And your forms I scarce can see. Frijef the time set I must leave you, But, before I'm called to go, leve is asomething I would tell you, And, I think, you'd like to know. the shutters, draw the curtain

This old frame that braved unshaken, Showers of shot and showers of shell, Calmly went through many a struggle Where its friends by thousands fell-Shakes and trembles like an aspen New, ('tis passing strange to me,') At the merset glimpse or mention Of a Tyrant's gailows tree.

So, my children, close the shutters, See no soldier lingers near, Draw the curtain, dim the lamplight, Then approach and lend an ear. Marrel not at what I tell you, For I tell of long ago—

en I was young, and see me, my locks are white as snow

Long ago there dwelt a people Good and generous, brave and free, Is a land of peace and plenty Bordering on a Southern sea. Life with them was an spring-time Where no standows ever moved; There were Nature's taxored children, Living in the land they loved.

And there dwelt a kindred people Next them, further from the sun, And the two had formed a compact To go through the world as one. Nature's seeming palatial bounties That upon the South-laud fell, Kept alive a Northern early Still the Union promised well.

Tyrant-trampled millions viewed them With a longing to be free, Calling forth a world of hatred From the incomes beyond the sea, And ere long each sail that gided Seaward from European piers, Brought its freight of whispered mischief For that envisus kindred a cars.

And ere long that envious kindred, Caught within the Jowery sarre, Met in friend with persecutions, Wrongs and insults everywhere; Till the virue of fortestance Ceased to be a thing of worth, And a civil war resulted 'Twist the sections—North and South.

Then the tyrant heads of Europe,
That their systems might prevail
Eldes with their dupes and these their Influence in the Northern scale.
Tyrants' neans were freely given,
Tyrants' arms were in the fight,
Tyrants' faits were on the sealoard,
Warding off their friends of right.

And the dreadful work that followed— Followed in this Southern land— Can not be described in language. That our minds would understand. Countries to their and understand. Crimes of every known degree. Traces broad where Northern wandals. Burned their roads toward the sea.

Homes of ease, and wealth, and beauty Crambled heath the victor's tread, Belphas wives and children driven Shelterless to log for bread; Shelterless to log a morrel, Lighted by the burning glow Of their stores, that left a people Not a morsel to bestow.

But I'll drop this theme, my children, For I've noted with surprise, For I've noted with surprise,
Something glittering through the dimness
Bright as diamonds in your eyes.
Lives there a feeling for us,
Ah! was that it? Well 'twas weak me to have sent a tear-drop Tracing down my furrowed cheek.

But the old Confederate soldier Couldn't help it, he must wm, For his thoughts were carried backward To those better days agone. When a wife upon his hosom, And a child with flaxen hair, nd a child with golden ringlets Robbed the world of every care.

Then his thoughts ran through the conflict, Up to where the end had come, And to where he left the prison For his tored ones and his home; And again he saw his chimneys Standing grim, and in a row Three neglected grares were near them But 'twas very long ago. 111.

When the end had come, my children, When the South had ceased to be, When the ground and generating people. Claimed no longer to be free. Then the victors, flushed and maddened By the taste of gold and blood, Pounced upon the conquered region. Doing all that victors could.

And while every thought was plunder, Where to plunder, when and how, Quiety the country glided Into what you see it now. The victorious chiefnin marking Great advantages it gave. Taxed his cunning till the victors, Each was made a tyrant's slave.

Well I mind me how they murmured When awakened to the state Of affairs that hung around them, But the waking came too late. Every right their fathers gave them Now was cancelled, now was gone, Lawing them to beg for favor, Kneeling round a tyrant's throne.

once agreeable. healthy, and effectual for effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, fallen hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the folicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning grey or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injudeleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambrie, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.
